Lightly sand all pieces to remove any rough edges. Paint the edges with a coat of Raw Sienna paint and set aside to dry.

Cover one side of each of the panels in Jasmyn paper and then with a craft knife trim away any excess paper.

Use your craft knife to trim away the paper that covers the holes in each piece, remembering that on the first and last panel, it is only necessary to cut away the paper from the side that is butted against another panel. The two outer sides do not need their holes.

Cover the remaining side of each of the panels with Jay and trim paper away from holes as explained above.

Lightly ink around the edges of each piece with Burnt Orange ink, allowing a little of the ink to colour the paper. To finish, ink the edges using the Brown ink to give the aged effect some depth.

Lay the completed panels in a row, alternating between the Jasmyn and Jay papers, starting and ending with a panel covered in Jasmyn.

Cut ten 6.5cm x 6.5cm (2.5" x 2.5") squares in Jasmyn (reverse side). Cut five 6.5cm x 6.5cm (2.5" x 2.5") squares of Jamie (reverse side).

On the panels covered in Jasmyn (as shown in Photo 2) centre the 6.5cm (2.5") square of Jasmyn (reverse side) and adhere. Rotate each of the Jamie (reverse side) squares so that they create diamonds and adhere on top. On each of these, embellish using a selection of rubons and brads.

On the Jay paper panels, turn the squares of Jasmyn (reverse side) so that it creates a diamond and adhere, making sure that it is perfectly centred. Add with foam tape a photo cut to 6.5cm x 6.5cm (2.5" x 2.5").

On the panel that only has the left holes cut out (this will be the cover) embellish as desired and finish with chipboard letters as a title.

Join each of the panels of this little album together using coordinating ribbon.

Hint

You can further sand the edges of your panels after you have inked them bringing small areas of the paper back to white on the edges to give it more of an aged appearance.
